FIGHT THE MEAT REGULATIONS • PROTECT YOUR LOCAL FARMER

LETTER OF SUPPORT

Recent changes in Health regulations make it illegal for farmers to sell meat unless it has been taken to a licensed abattoir – stressful for the animal, costly in time and money, with a large carbon footprint – and there have been no reported cases of farm food related illness from farm gate sales. Not only do these new regulations make it illegal for a farmer to sell meat to friends and neighbours, but they also make selling un-refrigerated eggs illegal, time consuming papers must be filled out to sell at a farmers market, and laws make it possible for inspectors to search cars, garages and houses as part of food inspection services. Even purchasing baby chicks and feed requires a registration process. Meanwhile, health issues with corporate food systems are rampant.

We the undersigned support the return of unregulated farm gate sales of traditional farm foods on the Sunshine Coast of British Columbia.
